

Second Announcement ICMI Symposium on: Mathematics Education and the Socio-Ecological

ICMI is hosting a one-day online symposium on 20th March 2023, to act as a gathering point for scholars working in what might be diverse areas, but whose concerns could be broadly grouped together as “socio-ecological”.

The aims of the symposium are as follows:

- To gather the “state of the art” of socio-ecological research from around the world and engage in dialogue across perspectives.
- To explore the different ways in which a theorisation of the socio-ecological influences the focus and methodological approach of mathematics education research.
- To consider practical implications of socio-ecological research for school/university curriculum and pedagogy, education outside formal structures, teacher preparation, and policy.

To cater for participants in different time zones, two symposia will be held, with an overlapping Plenary talk.

Symposium 2: <https://www.eventbrite.com/e/icmi-socioecological-symposium-schedule-2-tickets-513908984607>

You are welcome to attend both symposia.

Proposals, in the form of 500-word abstracts, need to be submitted by the deadline of 20th January 2023 via email (to: socio_ecological_symposium@yahoo.com), see further details overleaf.

We invite proposals – from a diversity of voices – for research reports and posters. These may focus on practice or theory or both, in relation to socio-ecological issues. In both formats, we welcome plans for active engagement of the audience: Research reports will involve a 20-minute presentation and 20-minute discussion (or equivalent). Poster sessions will include engagement and discussion with participants, with posters in the form of a 1-page pdf.

In your covering email (to: socio_ecological_symposium@yahoo.com) please indicate whether you are available to participate during Symposium 1 or Symposium 2. And:

- For research reports, please include, as a Word attachment, an abstract that includes: Your proposal title; author name(s) and institutional affiliations; a description of the theoretical and/or practical work to be presented, including its relation to the socio-ecological; and a plan for using the session time itself (abstract in English, and no more than 500 words).
- For a poster, please include, as a Word attachment, an abstract that includes: your proposal title; author name(s) and institutional affiliations; a description of the theoretical and/or practical work to be presented, including its relation to the socio-ecological (abstract in English, and no more than 500 words).

Word documents should be in the prescribed style given below and named as follows: First author surname_ResearchReport OR First author surname_Poster.

There will be a review process for all applications and two reviewers will read each submission. The criteria for review will be the extent to which the proposal addresses how the work, in its current form and/or future direction, links and relates across socio-political, ecological, and ethical issues. Scholarship involving multiple stake-holders as described above will be an advantage.

At the symposium, written and oral contributions will be offered in English. Informal engagement and meaning-making in the representative languages will be encouraged.

Informal proceedings of the symposium, including research report abstracts, will be collated, and made available. There are no current plans to invite fuller papers. However, there are plans to make the symposium resources available online; we will be encouraging participants to disseminate their work more widely, potentially in collaboration with each other; furthermore, developing the symposium writing into a journal special issue is under consideration.
